forum New anti-spam add-on for Google Chrome in the form of an extension. What is it? Anti-spam is a plug-in for Firefox and Chrome that works as an extension that allows you to see and filter spam. How does it work? Anti-spam helps get rid of spam email by stopping your email from going to spammers. The plugin's filters are like a filtering appliance, but they work right inside the web browser. Is it easy to use? The plugin works just like a filter, with a new interface for entering words. How do I use it? When you receive a message, Anti-spam will show a list of all the bad words. Double-click a word to see the full story. Click Done to save the words to your list. After you save the list, you can click Done again to save it to the URL bar. You can also edit your saved lists to add or delete words. Anti-spam will only show you words that it has verified or rejected. Why is it called "Anti-spam"? Why not "Spam"? Anti-spam was meant to get rid of spam. Spam is often sent by some anonymous person trying to sell you something. Anti-spam will filter out the unwanted messages. Why did the team name it "Anti-spam"? Anti-spam started out as a team of hackers making something to get rid of spam. As their project grew, they decided to take the name Anti-spam, as it sounded more official. It seemed like a good idea as it became a registered trademark. Will it stop ALL spam? No, but it will help stop most. The plugin filters spam by using a pre-defined list. You can easily edit your lists to add or delete words. Is there an official list of bad words for Anti-spam? Yes, the Anti-spam team has compiled a list of keywords and phrases, which they call the "No Spam List" or NSL. You can add any words to the No Spam List (NSL) by clicking the "Add to NSL" tab. Any word on the list will be blocked

The State Committee was reorganized into the National Council for Mass Media () in 1997. The State Committee was in charge of all aspects of communications in the country, including radio, television, press, Internet, and mail. In 1996, the Committee reported that the Bulgarian media had less freedom than in the Soviet Union but were not as tightly regulated as in Communist Poland, Czechoslovakia or East Germany. The Committee advised the Minister of the Interior that it would be satisfied with a 10:1 ratio between media and the Ministry, a ratio that has since been achieved. In 1997, the Committee was folded into the National Council for Mass Media which remains in place.
