Q: Find the probability that an infinite sequence of coin flips alternates heads or tails Alice starts a game where she flips a coin  $N$  times. What is the probability that the number of heads she gets is even, given that at least one of the first  $N$  flips yields a head? Here is a solution given by my book. I don't understand the second part. It is given that the probability of head is  $\frac{1}{2}$ . Now, if  $\hat{h}$  is the number
