Q: Call a controller from JavaScript I'm working on a small module that will be used in the future web pages. I want to call a controller from JavaScript, but I can't make it work. I have this code in a Controller: `public ActionResult GetData(string foo) { var data = new[] { new {id="1", value="some"} }; return Json(data, JsonRequestBehavior.AllowGet); }` So, when I call this action method I get a json. This is my view: `function GetData() { console.log(@Url.Action("GetData","Home", new { foo = "bar" })); }` The problem is that the url in the console.log is `/Home/GetData` I guess that something else in my view is not correct.

A: You should use the `Url.Action` method to generate a link to the action: `function GetData() { alert(@Url.Action("GetData","Home")); }`

A: If you want to use your `Url.Action` method you need to use it in the Controller or in an action that will be called by the controller. So, if you want to call the method from an action, you need: `Url.Action("GetData","Home")` If you want to call it from a view you need: `@Url.Action("GetData","Home")`

If you need more information about the Razor syntax, you can check out this SO question. Q: Is it possible to have an access token with a 3rd party? As you probably know, JSON Web Tokens allow 3rd parties to authent
