Upon arrival, Matt quickly deduces that this is no simple case of vandalism. Mystery on Main Street .[Construction and expression of the Streptococcus sanguis mutans LuxS-luxI fusion gene and its detection in vitro]. Streptococcus sanguis mutans (S. mutans) LuxS functions in quorum-sensing signal system, being well-defined, it has been known as one of the most significant virulent factors for dental caries. In the present paper, the luxS coding sequence was fused with luxI, and then inserted into the Escherichia coli-S. mutans shuttle plasmid pBCSK, which carries the E. coli gpt gene which confers resistance to ampicillin and gpt gene, to construct pZSBAC and pZSBAC-luxSluxI. From the red colonies on LB plates containing ampicillin, the pZSBAC plasmid was found to be transferred to S. mutans. The transfer rates was about 1.0% (6/600); and the contents of luxS and luxI gene in the recombinant were 100% detected by PCR and dot-blot analysis.Q: How to set specific tag value as separator in Enzyme So I'm using Enzyme to test my react components. When testing for an input, I want to make sure it has data in it, so that can return error messages etc to the user. const input = wrapper() wrapper.setState({[input.dataTestId]: "1234567890"}) expect(wrapper.instance().state[input.dataTestId]).toEqual("1234567890") expect(wrapper.instance().state.my-input.value).toBe("1234567890") It looks like React actually allows you to use spaces as values inside objects and arrays. How can I set these and ensure they get converted to a string, and properly compared? A: I'm not familiar with Enzyme, so I am assuming the following: data
