His website can be found @: He has created a new version of his software, which is available for download via his website. It is described as follows: It is designed to create numerical simulation on animate figures, also if the file's structure is very complex, either on the Creo® suite (Inventor 3D) or the Cadsoft® suite (Cad Eng-Cad, SolidWorks® and others). It enables you to create worlds in animated figures, according to your needs, even with tools. The figures are not limited to lines and cubes, but they may be of any complex shape. By using the tools available in the software, you may freely add any type of shape you want, right up to making a figure of your favorite character, or even of the entities you have already created. In the visual aspects that represent the mathematical entities in your dynamic world, an important section shows how many times a figure in the animation has been either modified or created. You can download them from the link in the description of the plugin on the website of the software developer. This platform serves as a means for presenting the results in a dynamic way, and can provide references that may be linked to provide more information. When you use this platform, you may specify the pieces of the animation by specifying this information. It is possible to create animation conditions that satisfy the criteria determined by the pre-established user, and make a large variety of animations. For example, you can use the system to see how many moving objects a figure represents, or even to learn the velocity of objects in the animation. Resizing in the image is naturally integrated with this tool. You can therefore always make an animation of any desired size, while you have a power to see
